Announces an Interdisciplinary Conference

Contemporary Ethical Problems in Engineering Practice: A Dialogue

Thursday May 31- Saturday June 2, 2007

Co-Sponsored by Villanova University College of Engineering &
The Ethics Program of the College of Liberal Arts & Sciences &
Gonzaga University

This conference will bring together practicing engineers, academics, representatives of professional societies, and others associated with ethical problems in engineering. The aim is to construct a picture of a) the ethical problems facing engineers in practice today; b) What can be or is being done to help engineers deal effectively with ethical problems, and c) How can we transfer this knowledge into the engineering curriculum? The conference will feature invited plenary speakers followed by panel discussions. The goal of the conference is to facilitate conversation, across disciplines, on the dilemmas facing the engineering professional.
